ISLANDS SINK INTO PACIFIC

Seas Sweep Over the Tuamotu Group and Inhabitants Climb Coconut Trees.

Papote, Tahiti, July 24, via San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 10.—It would seem that the ninety islands known variously as the low archipelago and the Tuamotu group are destined to be reclaimed by the Pacific ocean. Last January they were swept by a flood, and now, six months later, fierce gales from the southwest and southeast have again caused great crests to sweep over the islands. So far only four persons are believed to have perished, but the fear is great that when all the islands are cleared there may be a long list of fatalities. Three of the Tuamotu islands were under water to such an extent that the inhabitants had to climb coconut trees for safety. Houses and stores, copra, and finally the coconuts were destroyed.

PRESIDENT WARNS AGAINST LYNCHING

Declares That Mob Violence Weakens the Bonds of Civilization and Endangers Republic.

Oyster Bay, L. I., Aug. 10.—President Roosevelt has sounded a note of alarm over the increasing tendency toward the punishment of crime by mob violence. In a letter to Gov. Durbin of Indiana the president warns the people of the entire nation that by permitting or condoning mob violence they are weakening the bonds of civilization and increasing the chances of the overthrow of the republic and of the substitution thereof of a system in which there shall be violent alternations of anarchy and tyranny.

The president calls on enlightened public sentiment to oppose with all its influence the tendency to mob violence. He declares that lynch law is lawlessness, that lawlessness grows with what it feeds on, and that when mobs with impunity lynch criminals for one crime they are certain to begin to lynch real or alleged criminals for other causes.

The president points out that when the minds of men are habituated to the use of torture to avenge crimes of a revolting description, other lawless bodies will use torture to punish crimes of an ordinary type.

President Roosevelt vigorously urges that the penalty for that crime which most frequently induces a resort to lynching shall be applied swiftly and surely, but by due process of the courts, so that it may be demonstrated that the law is adequate to deal with crime by freeing it from every vestige of technicality and delay.

IRELAND NOW OFFERS GREAT LESSON TO THE WORLD AT LARGE

WYNDHAM BILL WILL HELP THE CELTIC RACE.

IRRIGATION MOVEMENT HERE

These Two Measures Are for the Benefit of Humanity at Large.

Two very big things have already happened in the brief history of the 20th century. Each of these things makes for the greater economic freedom of the race. Each represents a lofty conception of statesmanship. Both were undertaken by English-speaking peoples—the one by Great Britain, the other by the United States—the one the presentation to the English parliament of the Wyndham Bill for the restoration of the land to millions of people in Ireland, the other the passage, a year ago, of the National Irrigation Act, which aims to make homes for millions of people in the arid region of the West.

Between these two great measures there is a singular analogy. Both of them deal with the foundation principles of civilization. They aim to give man a secure foothold upon the soil. They aim to put him in possession of the primal means of existence. They recognize his right to participate in the ownership of natural wealth. Feudalism and individual prosperity. The event in Ireland marks the last gasp of dying feudalism. The event in America marks the entrance upon a new and momentous stage of that policy of material conquest over new areas which is the real secret of the prosperity and greatness of the republic. Both events do infinite credit to the governments that brought them about and both are hopeful signs of the tendency of the times.

But those who are familiar with what is going on in the west, strange as it may seem, look with a certain envy upon Ireland. She is dealing with a problem almost identical with our own. The only difference is the difference between rebuilding an old house and building a new one. But she has learned a lesson which we must learn in order to realize the full benefit of the policy on which we have entered. This is that there is no peril to the peace of a country like the peril of land monopoly.

Evils of Land Monopoly. Land monopoly robs men of a large portion of the products of their labor. It nullifies the spirit of constitutional guarantees which seek to give assurance of political freedom. No man is free in the true sense of the term who is beholden to another for the means of his existence. And land monopoly makes rebels instead of patriots. In the case of Ireland, it drove more than half the population away from its native soil. It filled their hearts with bitterness and even sent some of her children into the ranks of England's enemies in the hour when her life was at stake.

On the other hand, it is a well-recognized truth that no nation can have a better bulwark than millions of men who own their homes. It has been well said that "No man ever went to war in defense of his boarding house."

All these things are familiar enough to thoughtful people. Why say them again? For this reason: the crushing burden which Ireland is now preparing to slip from her shoulders, the American people are proceeding, by means of a subtle and silent process, to take upon their own: That is danger—very grave danger—that one of the most beneficent acts of national legislation ever framed and passed may miscarry—that instead of making homes for millions of small proprietors, we shall make vast stock ranches and lordly private estates for a comparatively few great proprietors.

An Entrancing Vision. The scheme for the reclamation of the arid public domain undoubtedly delights the imagination of the American people—the homes where the desert now exists. Gratifying evidence of the fact is found on every hand. But there is another side to the matter. How many people know anything about the details of the undertaking? How many actually appreciate the value of the imperial domain of the west which is still the property of the United States? Probably not more than one in ten thousand. And of those who do, a considerable portion belonging to the class of speculators and adventurers who know too well how to acquire valuable parts of this property for themselves and who are proceeding to do so with startling rapidity.

Some day the full story of the looting of the people's heritage will be told. When it is, the average American citizen will open his eyes with amazement. And he will pass from amazement to indignation. The question is, will he do so in time to avert anything or will he only lock the door after the horse is stolen?

A Dangerous Combination.

The present system of disposing of the public lands is the product of two kinds of statesmen—those who knew too much and those who knew too little. Selfish enlightenment and selfish ignorance make a dangerous team. And this is the team which has been whirling the American people to the edge of the precipice of land monopoly.

There are strong influences in the west who want laws that make easy for the land to be stolen. Stealing is a hard word. Let us call it land kleptomania. Then there are strong influences in the east which have been so busy putting over tariff and currency problems as to leave no time to become acquainted with far greater issues which actively involve the economic liberties of the people.

Ireland's Woes and Warning. There stands Ireland, emerging after centuries of bitter and heart-breaking strife from the tolls of land monopoly. And there stands the great west, marching steadily into the same hateful tolls. It is costing the English government over half a billion dollars to get out of the predicament which the American people are now getting into at an appalling rate—over two million acres of land going to the speculator every month, of over twenty-four million acres every year!

What will it cost us to stop the crime before it is too late? The price of this deliverance is an irrevocable public demand for the repeal of existing land laws. When this has rolled in upon congress from all parts of the country, congress will act in response to the recommendation of the president's message. Until then, there is no hope that it will act.

Remember Ireland! Help the American people to save their heritage before it is too late!
WILLIAM E. SMITH.

SUNDAY SERMON BY REV. RICHEY

SUBJECT OF ADDRESS, "A WAY TO ESCAPE."

HE GIVES A VERY ABLE TALK

The Rector of Trinity Church Takes His Text from Corinthians.

The rector of Trinity church yesterday took for his text a portion of the 13th verse of 1 Cor. X—"A Way to Escape." He said in part:

There is great comfort in these few words. They offer an assurance of which we may apply to every phase of life and carry with us to the end. There are some marvelous escapes recorded in the Old Testament. Even to Cain when he had slain his brother and was a murderer God made "a way to escape." Finding his burden heavier than he could bear he appealed to God who placed a mark upon Cain to protect him from the vengeance of his fellow men and to afford him a little time for repentance if he would seek it. To Noah who was beset on all sides by a population, the imagination of whose hearts was only evil continually, God made a way of escape. "Make thee an ark of gopher wood." And God gave every direction concerning the building of the ark. Had Noah procured highly bred horses and held himself in readiness to escape the flood, he would have found that the Lord hath no pleasure in the strength of a horse and that to escape one must use that particular "way" which God provides.

God heard the exceedingly earnest prayers of Abraham and sent his angel to deliver Lot and his family from the fire that engulfed the wicked cities of Sodom and Gomorrah. Lot's wife did not respect the covenant. She disobeyed and turned back to behold, and was turned to a pillar of salt. That incident should season our minds with the reflection that along with God's mercy goes hand in hand, His justice. We may accept His mercy, but to defy His justice entails destruction. If God provides a particular "way of escape" or means of salvation, that is the way that must be followed and the means that must be used. It was likewise so in the case of the prophet Jonah. Sinfully fleeing from the duty which God had laid upon him, he took ship, but soon found himself in the midst of an unexpected storm which placed in jeopardy his own life and that of all his sailors.

The lot fell upon Jonah and he confessed his sin to the sailors who reluctantly cast him into the sea, but even there the mercy of God followed the penitent prophet and made "a way to escape," and when he was delivered he went and performed the duty from which he had fled. Likewise there were in the days of old, cities of refuge, to which the criminal might escape, and if not overtaken before entering the gate, might find refuge. All these instances of "escape" are in some way closely connected with sin and they all go to show how merciful God is, and to what lengths He will go to make "a way to escape" for the sinner.

The apostle says "Confess your faults one to another," and we know that in the primitive days of the church it was customary for one who had committed mortal sin to confess it before the whole congregation as well as to the priest. But the church had power in such spiritual matters and did the same thing in a more excellent way. The older custom was a burden too heavy to bear for many. It sometimes led to scandal and was hard at best and the church ordered that the person should come privately and not before the whole congregation to receive counsel and the benefit of absolution. But in either case the divine order of things remains. The priest of God is not only the steward of God's mysteries but in a special manner "the minister of reconciliation." In case of mortal sin, that is, "of scruple or doubtfulness" the prayer book directs that to make one's repentance sure, and quiet his conscience, he shall go and show himself to the priest and receive counsel and the benefit of absolution. It is the power of God that pardons the sinner and gives life to the dead, but as in the case of Lazarus He turns to His apostles and says, "loose him and let him go." So the apostles understood it, saying that He hath given unto us the ministry of reconciliation.

Wherefore our blessed Lord who had made provision to convey His healing balm to the souls of men to the end of the world said "Whosoever sins you forgive they are forgiven." The helpless sinner cannot despise the ladder which God places down in the pit for his deliverance and seek to get out some other way. Like Moses and Jonah he must realize that it is the tender pity and mercy and love of God who beholding our misery and trouble, makes "a way to escape."

During the last few weeks the passenger traffic at the two depots has been especially heavy and the crowds of campers, excursionists, picnicers, summer boarders and the ever-present travelling men, form themselves into interesting groups in front of the depots. Especially at the St. Paul depot about the hour of ten the five trains arriving and leaving one after the other, bringing and taking away hundreds of people daily make a busy scene at the depot.

WILD WEST MAN IS IN WALLACE SHOWS

Jack Kent, Boss Hostler with Fish Aggregation, Gets Place with a Bigger Troupe.

Jack Kent, formerly boss hostler with the hard luck Forepaugh-Fish Wild West shows, is now master of transportation for Wallace brothers. The position was secured through a vacancy caused by the wreck at Durand, Mich., Friday. Saturday Kent closed the contract by telegraph, D. W. Watt acting for him. Kent joined the show at Bay City, Mich. He had been in this city since the time the Wild West people came to grief, and he declined to go out with them again.

TOBACCO TALK FOR THE GROWERS

Changes in Climate Make a Difference in the Industries of a Section.

Last week's storm did some damage in a few localities near the city. It was rather erratic in its actions for certain fields were not bothered at all by the wind while other lots nearby were laid over; this has all come up again but the leaves are slightly damaged in several sections. At Emerald Grove there was a fall of hail but the harm done is reported very light.

Harvest Near. Harvest time is quickly nearing and the crop is growing steadily in spite of the cool weather and the especially cold nights lately. More of the earlier fields have been topped this past week, and the prospect is very fair. Near Brodhead, in a few places the harvest has already commenced. Many of the later plantings will need a late fall to reach their full growth.

The last week has been another quiet one for the Janesville warehouses. Two carloads went to Philadelphia and one to Cincinnati a few days ago, from the Green warehouse.

A force of twenty is still plying at the Grundy warehouse and there are small forces at Erlor, Heddles and Joe Ryan warehouses. Sylvester's branch house at Milton has been at work condensing cases.

Climatic Change. Careful attention to the growing part of the tobacco business shows that extremely slight changes in the climate effect the growth of the weed, and are able to change an unprofitable business in certain localities to one that brings good returns, or these same changes in climatic conditions oftentimes will make an excellent industry bankrupt.

One Example. In West Virginia, in the Parkersburg district, up to the year 1885, growing the weed was a business that paid well all around and many people made their living from the different branches of the trade. Even five years later, in 1890, the plug factories in Parkersburg did enough business to employ 200 hands, but today it is all changed and there is practically no one in the business, and the trade is now found in Louisville and Lynchburg.

Another in the East. Another example of climatic influences on the tobacco industry is found in the east, in New Jersey. When the 19th century was still young, a paying leaf brought to maturity in New Jersey and Long Island, but at this date the annual crop that is sent out is less than a thousand pounds.

Connecticut Valley. After just completing a hurried trip through the tobacco growing sections of the Connecticut valley, and interviewing some of the growers, also the dealers whom I met, I have been able to form an opinion that the present growing crop is considered only to have fair prospects at this date. The condition is very much like that of Wisconsin as regards the uneven growth of the fields, likely due to the same causes. Many of the earlier fields have been topped and show a good spread of leaf, little behind that of other years but close to half the tobacco is small and late and cannot reach the harvest before Sept. 1st at best.

Milwaukee Wisconsin: There will be plenty of coal in Milwaukee next winter, but supply will cut no figure in relation to the demand, and the people will have to pay something like famine prices. This is owing to the beneficence of the coal barons, who own the mines and make their agents stick to card rates.

PIUS X., THE NEW POPE

IN April, 1902, when the late Pope Leo XIII. was in practically perfect health and there was no probability that his brilliant reign would be so soon cut short by the grim reaper, the pontiff remarked in a serious conversation with Father Perosi, the Italian priest whose musical compositions have made him famous the world over, that he was convinced that his successor would be Cardinal Sarto, the patriarch of Venice. When the recent conclave went into session there seemed little probability that Leo's prophecy would be fulfilled, for Rampolla seemed to have an almost commanding lead among the members of the college of cardinals, with Oreglia, Gotti and Serafino Vannutelli as strong possibilities. Besides these, there were several others who were thought to be likely candidates in case the rivalry among the leaders should become so intense as to make the election of any one of them impossible. But Sarto's name was scarcely mentioned except among the most reverent who remembered the prediction of Pope Leo and those who were mindful of the popularity in the Catholic church of Cardinal Sarto, which by many was regarded as being second not even to that of Leo himself. Cardinal Sarto, now Pope Pius X., evidently did not seriously consider himself as one of the papabili, for the evening before his election he declared, in speaking to a friend who had suggested that he might be the next pope, that when he started for Rome from Venice he had nature, beloved by many millions of people. It is certain that no prelate would have a more enthusiastic sanction from the laity.

Pope Pius X. is sixty-eight years old. He was born at Riese, in the province of Treviso, and was educated in the Shlesian Institute at Cologno, founded by the famous Dom Bosco. He was always of a serious turn of mind and when a young man his rector said to him that he had "never been a child."

Cardinal Sarto was not "discovered" until he had reached middle age. He was a parish priest in the province of Venice for the most of his years and finally became a bishop. His high executive qualities and unexcelled learning became known soon after his elevation and were recognized by the authorities of the church. It was not until 1893 that he was created a cardinal, at which time he was also named as patriarch of Venice. Thus the modest but able parish priest became the head of the province in which he had served so many years in a lowly position. His selection was made by the consistory of 1893, which was compelled to see the throne for the privilege of installing him as patriarch of Venice. In return for this concession, which was made through Premier Crispi, the church appointed an ecclesiastical vicar apostolic in northeastern Africa to assist the premier in his pet scheme of extending the African colonies.

Cardinal Sarto had not been in office his availability was commented upon by the really thoughtful writers more frequently than that of any other cardinal. As an example, a special correspondent of a prominent American daily last April wrote as follows to his paper concerning Cardinal Sarto and the papacy:

"It is Cardinal Giuseppe Sarto, the patriarch of Venice, the friend and patron of Abbe Perosi, the composer, who is at the present moment regarded not only throughout Italy, but likewise in the principal capitals of Europe, as destined to become the next pope. So little has been heard of him until now in connection with the papal succession that he may be regarded in the light of a dark horse in the race, which is perhaps due to the fact that he rarely goes to Rome, that he has never been a resident of the Eternal City, and that from the time of his being appointed vicar general of the diocese of Treviso until now he has held steadily aloof from all the projects of the curia.

"The vast majority of the Italian cardinals, and especially those who, forming part of the curia, are established in the Eternal City, have won their promotion to the sacred college as members of the diplomatic service of the papacy rather than as priests. And when a prelate has spent the greater portion of his life in diplomacy, and has found it the stepping stone to high honors, it naturally leaves him at the close of his career as representative of the Vatican abroad, with a greater bought a return ticket. But the unexpected has happened, and Leo's prediction has been fulfilled—Cardinal Sarto is Pope Pius X., and the Roman Catholic church is satisfied that the progress made during the reign of Leo XIII. is to be continued and perhaps amplified under the administration of the present pontiff.

Pope Leo's prediction was considered remarkable by reason of the fact that because of Sarto's position with reference to a modus vivendi between the church and the state he seemed to be on that important point directly opposed to Leo. For instance, Cardinal Sarto publicly announced his joy when there were strong probabilities of a union between church and state, and his accession to the pontificate has long been regarded in certain quarters as the solution of the Roman problem so long unsolved and so long a cause of dissension over all Italy, to say nothing of his bearing upon the attitude of other Catholic countries. Cardinal Sarto is noted for his prudence, having never meddled with politics, and for extreme independence. He is also a patron of the arts, and launched Father Lorenzo Perosi, the celebrated priest composer.

The cardinal is recognized as one of the most learned men in the church. He is a stickler for the exact truth as between the church and the people, and won much renown some years ago by destroying certain relics of doubtful authenticity. He brings to his high office a character of most attractive modesty, unusual energy in the direction of matters large and small, the talents of a fine administrative officer and the first qualities of an organizer. In addition to his abilities and his undoubted Christian character, the cardinal is, from the sweetness of his more than a year before he publicly declared for a union between church and state, speaking in no uncertain way. His utterances created a great sensation, and it was felt that he might have offended the holy father by the fervor of his words. Apparently he received the silent approbation of the pope, in whose estimation he ever held a firm place.

It was said at the time that Cardinal Sarto made his public announcement that the Austrian and Prussian ambassadors at the Vatican were endeavoring to induce the papal authorities to agree to a modus vivendi. Emperor Francis Joseph is reported to have written several letters to the pope with this end in view, and Emperor William of Germany is said to have been equally anxious to bring about an understanding between the Vatican and the Italian government.

For more than three decades a gulf has yawned between the rival palaces of king and pope, a gulf material and political. For thirty-five years—since the Italians battered down the massive walls near the old Porta Pia—earnest men and noble women of all parties have been dreaming and hoping that the mighty breach between victors and vanquished might in some way be closed.

It was said of Pope Leo that in 1878, when he had just succeeded Pope Pius IX., he longed for some amicable arrangement with the Italians, but if he did reasons of state outweighed his private wish. He was silent, and thus pledged himself to the no compromise party.

It is strange that while Sarto was never seriously considered by the public at large or by the ordinary press correspondents as a papal probability, leaning toward statecraft than toward the administrative and doctrinal duties of his office at Rome. Many persons declare that it is imperative that the next pontiff should be a prelate who would devote his entire energies to reforms of an administrative and economic character, and likewise to the more rigid enforcement of the doctrines and discipline of the church.

"Cardinal Sarto, the patriarch of Venice, is the man of all others who fills these requirements. He is probably the most able administrator of the Italian episcopacy, combines firmness and determination with abundant tact and common sense, and has managed to institute a number of very practical reforms in his archdiocese of Venice without giving offense either to the clergy or to the laity. He avoids all newspaper notoriety. Indeed, his name is rarely mentioned in the press. He has always understood how to maintain an agreeable yet dignified modus vivendi with the Italian authorities, from whom he derives his stipend, and has shown his enlightenment by the vigorous campaign which he has carried on against the veneration of relics of questionable authenticity. He is on friendly terms with the members of the reigning house of Italy, during the late reign took part with King Humbert and Queen Margherita in the launching of a man-of-war at Venice, as well as in other state ceremonies at which they were present, and would certainly be a most agreeable choice as pope to the present ruler of Italy. He is just sixty-eight years old, which will be in his favor in the eyes of the conclave, since, as a general rule, that number of years constitutes a guarantee that the pontificate will not be of undue length."

Citizens Should Be Interested in Janesville's Welfare—Need of Civic Pride.

Every citizen of Janesville is or should be interested in the growth and prosperity of the city. There are many things that each and every one, no matter what their state, can do that will count for betterment and progress. It may be no more than cutting out a thistle or two to prevent the spread of a noxious weed or the picking up of a waste paper or refuse from their own door yard, it all helps. Janesville needs a development of civic pride, a determination on the part of every citizen to make the city better than it is, the best of its size in the state. To do this there must be a "long pull and a strong pull and a pull altogether." Let the men who smoke cigars smoke Janesville cigars. It helps the town. When you want clothes, buy them of Janesville clothiers, buy your groceries of Janesville grocers, your dry goods of Janesville dry goods stores. Furniture, hardware and everything possible, buy at home and you will help build up the city and help yourself at the same time. Janesville merchants pay a good proportion of the taxes. They are here on the ground and ready to help with every good work and you can always be sure of fair treatment. There may be times when some smooth talking agent may make you think you can save a little by buying from some out of town concern but a little investigation will generally prove that they are wrong.

All agents are not frauds by any means, but it is rarely that one can do better by you than you can do with your own home merchants, and when you patronize the out of town agent you are building up some other town at the expense of your own. Even if you pay what sometimes seems a little more for some thing you buy at home than you would pay for it elsewhere it comes back to you in the end. Build up your home trade is a good principle for a city as well as for a country. Let all work together to build up the city and all reap the benefit.

ROCK

Rock, Aug. 9.—A runaway created quite a little excitement in this vicinity last Saturday. A horse broke away from its driver who was attempting to put on his bridle, and came dashing up the road minus the bridle and hitched to a carriage. Suddenly near the State school for the Blind, it collided with a cow that was grazing by the roadside. The cow was not harmed in the least by the encounter but the horse was completely capsize. After a number of men had helped the horse to regain its feet, it was found that save for a few breaks to the carriage no damage was done. The owner soon came and claimed his property.

Mr. Kemmer's slaughter house just outside the city limits, is soon to be torn down.

SMALL BLAZE IN GAZETTE BUILDING

Structure Used for Storing Waste Paper is Slightly Damaged by Incipient Flames.

Fire in an old brick building at the rear of the Gazette office, which is used for storing papers and paper scraps, was the cause of a fire alarm early Sunday night, and a few moments of apprehension lest the blaze should spread to the neighboring buildings and barns. The building already bore the marks of a previous fire and the additional damage done was insignificant. The flames were first seen shortly after midnight Sunday morning by Arthur Baumann. The most plausible explanation for the fire seems to be that some one entered the building through an opening in the wall, with the intention of spending the night, and that sparks from a pipe or cigar started the blaze.

BARLEY YIELD MUCH SMALLER

Estimates Show a Decrease of Five Bushels Per Acre Over Last Year's Crop.

Reports from the barley producing region of this state indicate a smaller production than last year, due to decreased yield per acre, but apparently the crop is larger than it was two years ago. The quality averages good, the berry being medium to plump, reasonably sound and generally good mulling quality. There is apparently less unsoundness than last year, but more medium and light weight barley. The color is uneven, depending on condition in which the crop was secured. The larger portion, however, is discolored by rains during harvest. Average estimates as compared with last year vary considerably, but show no change of importance. Yield per acre estimates range from twenty to fifty bushels and average about thirty-two bushels, or five bushels per acre less than last crop, and four bushels more than the crop of 1901.

CONCERNING CORRECT SPEECH By William J. Lampton in The Record or For August.

Oh why should the spirit Of Grammar be proud With such a wide margin Of language allowed?

Of course there's a limit—"I knowed" and "I've saw," "I seen" and "I've saw," "I seen" and "I done it," Are rather too raw;

But then are there are others No better than they One hears in the talking He hears every day.

"Where at? asks one person, Quite thoughtless. And: "Who," Asks another, "did Mary Give that bonnet to?"

Hear a maid as she twitters: "Oh, yes, I went out With sue and her fellow In his runabout."

And hear a man saying: "Between you and I, That block of Pacific Would make a good buy."

And this from a mother, Too kind, to her boy: "I had rather you shouldn't Do things to annoy."

And this from a student, Concerning a show, Who says to the maiden: "Let's you and I go."

IMPORTS.

Commerce between the United States and Russia made its highest record in the fiscal year just ended. In both exports and imports from Russia, the figures for the year just ended are larger than at any time within the last twenty years, and the grand total of imports and exports combined is larger than any year in the history of our commerce with that country.

A statement regarding the commerce of the United States with Russia, presented by the department of Commerce & Labor through its Bureau of Statistics, shows that the total exports to Russia in the year ending June 30th, 1903, aggregated $17,606,812. This total is nearly double that of the exports in 1901, and about 50 per cent in excess of those of 1902. Imports also show a marked growth for the past year, and the total for the year is greater than in any preceding year in the history of our trade with Russia.

The record of the year 1903 shows a larger total of exports to Russia than in any preceding year, while the total commerce (imports and exports combined) with Russia, was larger in the fiscal year 1903 than in any preceding year.

Cotton, agricultural implements, and manufactures of iron and steel are the most important factor in the export trade from the United States to Russia. In 1902 (the detailed figures of 1903 are not yet available) the total value of cotton exported to Russia was over 3 million dollars, of agricultural implements, over 2 millions, of manufactures of iron and steel over a million and four hundred thousand. The statement of the Bureau of Statistics divides the exports of Russia into four groups: Russia on the Baltic and White seas second those for ports on the Black sea; third, those to Asiatic Russia, and fourth, those to what is classed Russian China, which term includes all shipments to the territory in the vicinity of Port Arthur, leased to Russia by China in 1898.

The large proportion of the exports to Russia go to the ports on the Black and White seas. The total for the year 1903 to Russia on the Baltic and White seas was $13,399,370, to Russia on the Black sea $2,723,258, to Asiatic Russia $802,428 and to Russian China $681,756.

In the exports to ports on the Baltic sea, cotton predominates. The total of cotton shipped to those ports in 1902 being three-fourths of a million dollars in value, manufactures of iron and steel about one million, wheat flour over one-half million and agricultural implements over one-half million.

To Russia on the Black sea the largest single item is agricultural implements, nearly 2 millions; iron and steel manufactures about 100 thousand and manufactures of fibres over 100 thousand dollars.

To Asiatic Russia, flour forms the principal article, the total value of flour exported to that section of Russia being in 1902, over 600 thousand dollars out of a total of about one million.

All of the cotton shipped to Russia goes to the Baltic and White sea ports, over three-fourths of the agricultural implements to the ports on the Black sea, more than half of the manufactures of iron and steel to the Baltic and White sea ports, while flour is about evenly divided between Asiatic Russia and the ports on the Baltic and White seas.

A STINGING REPLY.

Governor La Follette has stirred up the kettle and should not complain now of the governor's recent charges of wholesale corruption on the part of the corporations. The Racine Journal says: "In talking of corporate influence upon legislators, Governor La Follette forgets the one proven case, that of his own associates accepting $2,000 from the school book trust. Was it not been attempted with the state law for legislation?"

There is only one way in which the governor can silence such criticisms, and that is by furnishing evidence that he declared "it is susceptible of proof that money has been offered to the members of the state legislature and refused." If the governor stands for purity in politics he should remember the same rule works both ways and that an official who has knowledge of an illegal act and fails to do his duty in seeing that the laws are properly enforced is practically as guilty as the offenders. There is only one thing for the governor to do and that is to "make good" by the presentation of evidence to support the charges he has made of attempted corruption.

Of course it is fully appreciated that one wrong is no excuse for another and reference to the school book scandal is no palliation for the other offenses charged by the governor. At the same time there can be no question that the school book incident was one of the most unfortunate mistakes connected with the administration of the governor and necessitated some very humiliating excuses on the part of his friends. No attempt was ever made to probe the matter of fix the blame where it properly belonged and it is little wonder, therefore, that the incident has been seized on as furnishing an excellent opportunity for a stinging retort to the governor's recent accusations in which he has arraigned the business interests of the state as being under corporation control, and openly charged that bribery has been attempted with these law makers.

Michigan has made a beginning in the work of expiation and reparation of her lumbermen's crimes against nature, by setting aside three townships of land in Roscommon county—about 69,000 acres—as a state forest reserve, and appropriating $7,500 per year to be sent in connection therewith. It appears to be one of the regions already devastated by the ax, so that the work will probably be mostly in the way of replanting and protection. Encouragement for good returns, after a while, is found in the experiences of private forestry in New England where, as stated by Prof. Roth, there are timber tracts, with no trees over sixty years old, which will cut over 30,000 feet board measure to the acre.

If insomnia should keep all dishonest debtors awake until they settled with their creditors—as it is alleged to have done in the case of a New Jersey woman, who never had a night's sleep until she paid a bill of $30 for groceries bought twenty-seven years previously, and who slept until 10 o'clock in the morning after she had paid it—it would come to be recognized as a moral agency of a distinct value; any interference with which, through the sale of roasted peanuts or other soporifics would be frowned upon as contrary to the general weal. In some future day it may be required of every applicant for a sleep-producing bag of peanuts that he first show that he has not a dollar in his pocket rightly belonging to some other fellow.

Indiana promises that the Evansville lynchings will be fully prosecuted. Other promises of like nature have been made but thus far no additions to the state prisons have been asked for the hold the whitecappers.

PRESS COMMENT
 Milwaukee Journal: Sam Cook as governor would give everybody a rest. But the day of strenuousness is hardly over.

Green Bay Gazette: Press dispatches say five kings are to attend a wedding ceremony over in Europe. There is likely to be trouble when five kings are found in a bunch.

Racine Journal: There are gold mines in Wisconsin, but they are in its vast natural resources, its manufacturing, agriculture and forests, and above all in the courage, honor and enterprise of its people.

Merrill Advocate: Merrill has had one street carnival and does not want another. In fact, this is the sentiment of all towns that have suffered themselves to allow these kind of rotten attractions within their gates.

Milwaukee Sentinel: The state press will please take notice that the increase of $8,000,000 in Milwaukee's assessed valuation over last year was not all beer, nor is it all paper. It represents actual increase in property.

Chippewa Independent: Congressman Jenkins is receiving very many flattering and deserved notices from the press of northern Wisconsin for the office of governor. We do not know that he is ambitious in that direction, but we do know that in the event of his nomination he would make a strong candidate and receive a hearty support from his neighbors and friends in this city.

Eau Claire Leader: Live cattle and hogs are now lower than they were during the last three years. Hogs that were $8 per hundred are now down to $5. Cattle that sold for $9 sell now at $6. It is a reduction of 33 1-3 per cent. The question is, is the consumer of meat getting the benefit of this fall in prices? They stood the advance; they should now be rewarded with the decline.

Appleton Crescent: Governor La Follette took it upon himself to inflict his Chautauque speech at the Monona Lake assembly last week, adding thereto a tirade against the last two legislatures, the speech being entirely out of good taste. Although the state administration officials were out in force, yet a large number of Madison's prominent citizens were conspicuous by their absence. The speech was regarded as an unwarranted infliction.

BRIEFLETS

The Fates have surely set the mark of future renown upon the brow of the politician who now plays the early bird act. Unfortunately for the worm, it was an early riser, too.

It seems that there's a fresh outbreak of quoting that Biblical proverb that a rich man has no more show of going to heaven than a camel has of going through the eye of a needle. All of which may be true; but most of us are willing to try a smaller place than this to squeeze through.

BARBERS' BOARD IS IN SESSION

WILL REMAIN IN THIS CITY MOST OF COMING WEEK.

MANY APPLICATIONS FILED

Over Two Thousand Persons Have Already Made Application, But Nearly a Thousand Remain.

Sessions of the state barbers' board will be held in this city during the greater part of the week. Messrs. Axel R. Douhan of Superior, president of the board, and Henry Heine of Reedsburg, the treasurer, arrived in the city this morning to confer and act with M. H. Whitaker of this city, the board's secretary. No official meeting has been held thus far.

Applications Piling In
The busiest days of the members of the board have yet known, are now occupying the calendar. All applications must be made by the eleventh of this month. Those barbers who do not apply for licenses before the eleventh of the month will find a five dollar examination fee instead of the present one dollar fee, awaiting them if they choose to overstep the time limit. This prospect has no attractions for most barbers, and their applications are beginning to pile in. At the beginning of this week 1950 license applications had been registered, and about 100 have been received today. There are about 3000 barbers in the state.

Board Is Busy
The sudden arrival of this mass of applications to be dealt with means a strenuous session for the state board. A meeting may be held this afternoon or at some time tomorrow or later in the week to settle questions which have arisen since the last meeting of the board, but at present the clerical work facing the board is a plenty to occupy them.

VETERANS WILL MEET IN BELOIT

Annual Reunion of the Rock County Soldiers and Sailors Comes September 9.

The annual reunion of the Rock County Ex-Soldiers and Sailors' union will be held at Beloit, Sept. 9th, 1903. It is expected that this meeting will be the largest and most enthusiastic in the history of the association. Good speakers will be present. An interesting program is being prepared. All old soldiers, their families and their friends, and citizens generally are cordially invited to join with us in recalling to mind that period in our country's history in which both men and women, soldiers and civilians made great sacrifices to preserve the union of states, wipe out the curse of slavery, and establish the fact that the nation is greater than any state. By order of Com. W. J. McINTYRE, Sec.

An Interrogation—Osteopathy.

Have you had it correctly defined? Or is your knowledge only hearsay?

It means something. Twenty-four legislatures have laws for its practice.

And it doesn't mean diseases of bone.

And it doesn't mean "disease of joints."

And it doesn't mean "curing disease by the use of the bones."

It means briefly "curing disease by securing a perfect circulation of blood and unobstructed nerve action."

More in detail it means "a system of treating diseased conditions by intelligent and scientific manipulation for the purpose of removing impingement or obstruction to blood, lymph and nerve, thus assisting natural processes in their return to the normal and by the intelligent use of rational hygienic measures and delicate rules that may commend themselves to the wisdom of the practitioner."

ART STUDY BOAT SAFELY LAUNCHED

A Sixteen Foot Row Boat Has Been Built by Four of the Men.

Four of the men of the Art Study company, E. W. Hill, B. Raphael, G. Hanbrook, and A. Strobel, have recently built a sixteen foot row boat. Yesterday morning the formal christening took place and the program was carried out as planned without a hitch, except that E. W. Hill nearly fell in the river.

The name chosen was "Badger" and was selected by taking the first letter of the first name of each owner, including Mrs. Hill. It took three days to build the craft and it is to be kept beneath the Art Study building. It is four oared, three and one-half feet wide with a flat bottom and is owned equally by the four members of the company.

The idea of building a row boat was suggested because of their staying at the same house and coming together from Chicago.

The hull was designed by Mr. Hill, who is superintendent of the company and the interior work was executed by A. Strobel. G. W. Hanbrook and B. Raphael had charge of the decorating of the craft, which is a model of its kind.

The christening was a simple matter and was in charge of Mr. Hill, who made an appropriate address as the graceful craft slipped into the stream.

THE... REASON WHY

Why our teas or coffees have gained a reputation? Because we put our heart and soul in the tea and coffee business and look after it with a zealous care. We're particular that each tea or coffee is blended just so, because, now that we have you suited it would be poor policy to allow the quality to depart from its usual high standard.

FATHER GOEBEL TALKS ON CRIME

POINTS TO ALLEGED MURDERER AND HORSE THIEF.

HAVE NOT REACHED MAJORITY

Man Who Is Supposed To Have Killed Zimmerman Is Not Yet Twenty-One—Speaker Points Moral.

Father W. A. Goebel yesterday took advantage of the recent instances in which youthful lawbreakers have been held for criminal acts to drive home a pointed lesson to the congregation at St. Mary's. His remarks took the form of an impromptu lesson of instruction rather than of a sermon. The importance of strict obedience to the admonitions of parents was emphasized.

Criminals Were Young

As object lessons for his discourse Father Goebel pointed to Tom Joyce, who is in jail awaiting trial for the murder of Herman Zimmerman, the suspected murderer is nineteen years of age. Garry, the supposed horse thief has reached the age of twenty since the time he was imprisoned. Glen Bailey, who was today taken to the Industrial school at Waukesha, is thirteen years of age. A brother, even younger, was implicated in the same difficulty.

Should Obey Parents

As all of these four fall short of the legal age when the son is free in the eyes of the law from the restraint of the father, Rev. Goebel was given an excellent opportunity to admonish the younger members of his congregation to give strict heed to the instructions and advice of their parents.
